If you're writing articles for your online efforts, you know how hard it is to come up with article ideas. Churning out articles day after day can be quite a challenge. In order for article marketing to work properly, you need to feed the beast. That means that you often need a lot of well written articles going onto the article directories on a fairly regular basis. While it's not terribly hard to actually do the writing itself, I know that I often struggle trying to come up with interesting ideas. I mean, if you're writing about acne, there's only so much you can say, right? And even if you can come up with good article ideas, you still have to do your research to make sure that you're providing accurate and detailed information to the readers. Usually, this entails entering your keyword into a search engine, visiting all of the top results, scanning the text to see if the information is useful or not, copying down any of the important information, and then finally getting around to writing your article. This all takes so much time! Some people choose to use an article writer or article re-writer software and PLR articles. But, I don't know about you, but a lot of the PLR I've gotten hasn't been all that great. Why would I want to take a poorly written article and put it into an article re-writer getting an article that sounds even worse! When I found the Article Ideas software, all of this changed. This little piece of magic does all the hard work of article writing for me. I simply enter in my keyword and it automatically searches the top 100 results in Google for REAL INFORMATION. That means that it completely ignores results that seem to have a commercial intent. The software easily compiles this information all in one place. Now, I'm not saying that I simply take the articles that the software returns, combine them, rewrite a bit and call it my own. That would be plagiarism. But if I already know that I want to write about the Top 10 Ways to, the results can help me find some of the ways that I didn't think of before. It can also help me during those times when I've simply run out of things to say. Just seeing all the different things that others have written about my topic, I'm able to get a lot more ideas. I suddenly begin to see how I can write a new take on an old idea.
