Like his father, the late James J. Dante, co-author of The Nine Bad Shots of Golf, Joe has concentrated on the teaching side of the game. The hours he spends each season on the tee and giving playing lessons will match those of any club pro in America. The esteem in which his Rockaway River Country Club members hold him is attested to by the annual day given him known as Dantes Inferno. He has been so pried with gifts at these affairs that, on occasion, he has had to hire a truck to take them home. Dante is married and is the father of two boys. He was recently elected president of the New Jersey Professional Golfers Association. LEN ELLIOTT, sports editor of the Newark News since 1939, has studied and written extensively about both the technique and mechanics of the golf swing. As a senior golfer he has been a serious contender in both the New Jersey and New York Metropolitan championships, and in three attempts has thrice qualified sectionally in the USGA national senior championship. With Joe Dante he wrote Stop That Slice; with Jim Dante and Leo Diegel The Nine Bad Shots of Golf.
