The money is in the list, right? Well, that's not exactly true it's not the whole truth anyway. The biggest obstacle you face when you publish an ezine is the fact that people have gotten used to getting junk (from your competitors) disguised as helpful information. Many publishers write about every new trend (and the underlying product) because their writing from a mentality of I gotta get paid and when you do that, you completely forget about the people you're writing to and start to concentrate on you and what you want. That's a surefire recipe for disaster. Whenever you write anything for your subscribers, don't write with the sole intention of getting a check. Getting checks is nice but your business lives or dies based on how many people believe you genuinely want to help them achieve their goals. Show your readers that you value them enough to part with real, quality information and that you see them as more than just a dollar sign. Otherwise, you're going to be lumped into a group with all the rest of your competitors with a big sign on your forehead marked Will Do Anything for Commissions. Responsive readers come from a conscious effort to build a solid relationship with them. People connect with other people. Not mindless robots that only want commission checks. Now don't get me wrong. I'd love for you to buy the products I recommend, but I'm not going to force that on you. When I do enough of the right things in your eyes, I will have earned the right to ask you for your money in the form of commission checks from other products and services that I not only recommend, but truly believe in. The point is I have to earn that right by giving up good information that is of actual use to you. When you write anything you expect other people to read, the same thing applies to you. _____ Go to my Tradebit page for more great products on many topics.
