Excerpt: Akela the Lone Wolf lay by the side of his rock as a sign that the leadership of the Pack was open, and Shere Khan with his following of scrap-fed wolves walked to and fro openly being flattered. Bagheera lay close to Mowgli, and the fire pot was between Mowglis knees. When they were all gathered together, Shere Khan began to speak a thing he would never have dared to do when Akela was in his prime. He has no right, whispered Bagheera. Say so. He is a dogs son. He will be frightened. Mowgli sprang to his feet. Free People, he cried, does Shere Khan lead the Pack? What has a tiger to do with our leadership? Seeing that the leadership is yet open, and being asked to speak Shere Khan began. By whom? said Mowgli. Are we all jackals, to fawn on this cattle butcher? The leadership of the Pack is with the Pack alone. There were yells of Silence, thou mans cub! Let him speak. He has kept our Law"; and at last the seniors of the Pack thundered: Let the Dead Wolf speak. When a leader of the Pack has missed his kill, he is called the Dead Wolf as long as he lives, which is not long. Akela raised his old head wearily:
