CPA stands for Cost Per Action, or Cost Per Acquisition. CPA Marketing is different from affiliate marketing in the sense that unlike affiliate marketing, your customers do not need to purchase anything in order for you to get paid. In CPA Marketing, these companies (known as CPA Networks) will pay you whenever you send someone to the advertisers' website and they perform a particular action (such as entering his/her email address/zip code, filling up a short form, signing up for a free trial product offer, etc.). As long as the visitor completes the intended action required by the advertiser, you'll get paid. While you can say that it is simpler to make money (compared to affiliate marketing), you need to do it right in order to be able to generate a substantial income from CPA Marketing. If you are interested in making money from CPA Marketing, here's a guide you may want to consider - "CPA Overdrive".
