The brain is the center by which other human characteristics are defined. Creativity, for example, is much associated with the brain. So is personality. The brain lets us make decisions and define colors and smells. This organ controls every other perceived activity of the human body. However, the human brain, as strong and as invincible as it may look, is not going to stay that way forever. As with any other part of the body, the human brain will wither in the future. One's lifestyles and all other external factors will take its toll against the human brain. As one grows old, the human brain will become slower in terms of functioning and rejuvenating itself. However, there are solutions.
