This Unique Software Will Skyrocket Your Click Through Rate On Autopilot! From: Alex Major Date: 2010 Dear Internet Marketer, There has been a MAJOR change on the internet that may cost ignorant internet marketers millions (maybe billions) of dollars. A San Francisco Chronicle article sums it up best: Facebook directs more online users than Google This friend-casting of information has helped propel Facebook into a major force in directing traffic around the Web.A big part of the Facebook experience is how friends and family share Web links to interesting news stories, photos, videos and Internet sites. According to Web measurement firm Compete Inc., Facebook has passed search-engine giant Google to become the top source for traffic to major portals like Yahoo and MSN, and is among the leaders for other types of sites. This trend is shifting the way Web site operators approach online marketing, even as Google takes steps to move into the social-media world. Some experts say social media could become the Internets next search engine. People are spending less time navigating the Internet on their own and are now navigating the Internet based on their friends recommendations or their friends activities, said Dave Yovanno, chief executive of Gigya Inc., a Palo Alto firm that offers social-media services. Thats one of the big trends we started picking up on probably four or five months ago. For years, Web content creators had to worry whether they had the proper level of search-engine optimization to make sure search engines listed them among the top results. Now, they have to consider what companies like Gigya offer - social-media optimization. Marketers must focus on social marketing in addition to traditional search, as customers have a multi-pronged way of finding information, said Jeremiah Owyang, a Web strategist for the Altimeter Group, a San Mateo consulting firm with clients like Gigya. The clear-cut channels of yesteryear are now an intricate set of connections. "Facebook's meteoric growth as a Web destination was a factor. Facebook says it has 400 million active members, including about 225 million added in just the past 12 months. Its size now rivals that of major Web portals and its demographics mirror those of the Internet in general" "Putting all this information together, we can say that Facebook has become an integral part of the consumer Web experience, similar to how portals like Yahoo and MSN are part of most consumers' online sessions, So the message for the advertising industry is that more serious attention needs to be paid to social-networking sites like Facebook, and advertisers need to figure out how to leverage this traffic." [...] Today I bring you a solution to benefit from all that traffic and awareness. I have found a method that instantly grabs attention based on Facebook user behavior! A simple to use software created to increase sales and/or leads from ANY web page by effectively attracting people's attention through Facebook chat window Look-A-Like Ads!
