Dear Groom-to-be, Are you frustrated and stuck for words? Are you stressed about what to write? Are you worried about whether your speech will be good or not? Giving a grooms speech is no piece of cake. In fact, if you dont do a good job of planning for it, theres a good chance you could end you flopping. Either youll do a bad job of writing the speech, so that it doesnt contain beautiful anecdotes, thoughtful and charming comments about your bride, and praise and thanks for your parents, friends, and best man; or youll deliver it poorly, so it sounds wooden or unrehearsed. Either way, few things are worse than delivering an embarrassingly bad grooms speech. It will literally make you look bad in front of all of you friends and family members, as well as all of your new brides friends and family members. So Whats the Best Way to Write a Compelling and Emotional Grooms Speech? When it comes to giving a grooms speech, there are a couple of things to keep in mind. The first is that you will most likely be giving the speech after your wifes father speaks and before your best man speaks. For this reason, you will probably want to thank your wifes father at the start and say something nice to your best man before he speaks. A good grooms speech also contains other elements: lavish thanks and praise for the brides parents and family, thanks to your own parents, friends, groomsmen, and best man. Additionally, the grooms speech should say something nice to maid of honor. Fortunately for you, you dont need to figure out how to put all of these elements together in a way that generates a powerful, compelling speech. Instead, you can use one of the 10 templates I have prepared for you... Introducing...
