"If you love Bob Marley, Sublime, and Jack Johnson and you're a regular on the State Street scene, then chances are you're already crazy about Rebelution. Their combination of reggae, hip-hop, and rock have made them a favorite of music lovers all over town" -- The Santa Barbara Independent Rebelution is currently working to extend their music to an international level. With the success of their original self produced EP in 2006, the band is working on their first full-length album along with consistent live performances. By playing various venues throughout North America, Rebelution uses their innovative shows to capture their audience and expand their fan base. "Perhaps the biggest hit of the day was Rebelution, a popular local outfit specializing in California reggae. They played a 45-minute set to a crowd of people dancing and singing to the catchy, often politically-charged verses." -- Santa Barbara News-Press Rebelution's dynamic sound is led by diverse vocalists and guitarists Matt Velasquez and Eric Rachmany, who alternate between lead and backing vocals. Together with the elevating melodies of Rory Carey on keyboards and hard-hitting beats by bass player Marley D. Williams and drummer Wesley Finley, the band will make you move both physically and mentally. Within the last year, Rebelution has especially made a name for themselves performing with notable artists like Pepper, SOJA, Yellowman, Talib Kweli, E-40, and The Pharcyde. Rebelution has already proven themselves in the musical arena and intends to further expand their success with a sound that confidently claims itself unique.
