Details: Behavior is one of several projects fronted by producer/composer Michael A. McCann. The debut LP, "The Story of the Mechanical Man" (2001) is a sonic tour de force which showcases a full range of electronic music. From jazz-fusion to trip-hop and trance, the album is a rich mlange of sounds, textures and moods. "The Story of the Mechanical Man" represents a dynamic fusion of analog and digital, electric and acoustic, human and mechanical. The result of Behavior's experimentation is a complex and unique musical experience. Behavior's frontman/mastermind Michael McCann wrote and produced "The Story of the Mechanical Man" as a concept album. The LP features several collaborations with Andrea Revel and samples from the Cowboy Junkies and David Axelrod. In addition to fronting Behavior, McCann is also behind musical alter-ego Suture, and produced Andrea Revel's latest release "Citysong". With the combined successes of Behavior and Suture, Michael McCann has acquired an impressive resum.

McCann is also well known for his work as sound designer on the films of Michael Dowse, including the 2002 cult hit "FUBAR." Behavior's high energy debut has garnered much attention since its initial 2001 release. Album tracks have appeared on compilations from Kenwood Audio USA (2001) and more recently, California based label "Electric Monkey". In addition, music from "The Story of the Mechanical Man" was featured in Michael Dowse's award winning film "Room 237," Alliance Atlantis's television drama "The Associates", and the "Law of Enclosures" (2000) feature film promotional trailer starring Sarah Polley. Behavior tracks can also be heard on SportNet's free-ride, extreme bike series "Drop In," which is broadcast weekly and is available on DVD. Behavior titles have proven successful on the charts as well, reaching the top 5 on CBC's New Music Canada's Electronic, House and Ambient charts; in addition to online charts VitaminiC, Garageband, RadioAid, Maddhouz Radio, MP3.Com, IUMA, and Raw42.
