Details: After playing all across Canada's prairie provinces, Tripmeter returns with their new release, The End of Everything We Are. Though their debut album, Wide World Crashing, garnered them a Western Canadian Music Award nomination their new full length album shows them too driven to play it anywhere close to safe. From its head-snapping, groove-heavy choruses, to its wispy electronic interludes, the album surges forward, boasting searing synth-mospheres, growling baritone guitars and a powerful dual-vocal attack. The lyrics run deep and the melodies by turns haunt and soar, while the songs together feel viscerally like an unfolding story. And if there could ever be any doubt about their sincerity and passion, well, their live shows put all those uncertainties to rest - soundly.
