J Kidd incorporates many of the everyday aspects of his life into his music and originally became interested in rap during his high school days. Somewhat of a rapping prodigy, J Kidd found that he had the ability to freestyle and battle against a number of local NJ artists with far more experience in the rap game. It became obvious that J Kidd had a natural ability as a lyricist and he further honed his freestyle skills through a variety of venues: freestyle contests, parties, backyard battles, and even the South Brunswick High School lunch room. J Kidd was driven by his desire to perform and his desire to illustrate his newfound talents led him to begin writing songs. He released his first solo album in 2003 and followed with his second in 2005. His long awaited third solo album is now available for purchase and it delivers even more perspective of life in J Kidds favorite state New Jersey. This original album entitled The Talk of New Jersey delivers head boppin beats and amazing lyrics that are by far his best works to date. Many of the songs from this album are destined to be hits at clubs, bars, and parties throughout Jersey. The record was produced by Roc on Command Productions and features a number of up and coming solo artists including White Mic and Noelle.
