Veteran video game composers Cris Velasco and Sascha Dikiciyan score the apocalyptic game Hellgate: London using orchestral, rock, and eerie sound design elements, resulting in a score that is filled with action, horror, and redemption. 13 MP3 Songs ELECTRONIC: Ambient, CLASSICAL: Film Music Details: Cris Velasco and Sascha Dikiciyan are two of the most in-demand composers in the video game industry today, having scored 12 game titles in the past year alone. Their unique fusion of cutting-edge electronica and cinematic orchestra can be heard in such games as Haze, Splinter Cell 4, Spy Hunter: Nowhere to Run, and Hellgate: London among many others. Since partnering in 2005, Velasco and Dikiciyan have garnered critical acclaim for their versatility and fearlessness of pushing the boundaries of music whether its composing an elegant string arrangement, dramatic orchestral score, hard-hitting rock tracks or raw electronic beats. As artists and musicians, Dikiciyan and Velasco are constantly evolving, well versed in navigating the dynamic gaming environment and incorporating the latest technologies and tools into their work. They have formed strategic partnerships with Native Instruments, Steinberg, Audio Impressions and M-Audio. A testament to their wide-ranging skills as composers, the scope of their music also reaches beyond gaming and into the advertising, music and feature film arenas. Velasco writes original soundtracks for independent films and scores commercials for high-profile clients such as Toyota, Disney, Patron, Glad, and Mattel. His music has been used by New Wave Entertainment, NFL Films, Nickelodeon, the NBA, and the Family Channel, to name a few. Dikiciyan produces original dance music and remixes under the name Toksin, winning BPM Magazines Remix contest with his original re-production of BTs anthem, Communicate, and collaborating with some of the worlds most respected and renowned vocalists and producers in dance music. He also composed original music for the Damian Neiman-directed film Shade starring Gabriel Byrne, Sylvester Stallone, Jamie Foxx and Melanie Griffith.
