Details: Vincent Cross writes songs that fuse lyrical verse with heart-felt mountain string band sounds. His 12 track debut album Home away from Home features a full acoustic bluegrass band, as well as tunes stripped down to just mandolin and guitar. Cross uses his crystal clear voice to create atmosphere and authenticity according to the legendary Odetta. Sometimes, he sings with the traditional high-lonesome bluegrass sound, while other times he quiets down to a near whisper. The new CD deals with a life lived far from home. Cross has lived in many of the worlds capitals: London, Paris, Dublin, Sydney and now New York. After-hours tells the tale of how alcoholism can destroy ambition, which he saw first hand while growing up above a pub in Ireland; and Sensitize broaches the inability to love in an over stimulating world. Blurbs: "In the East Village 2008, I heard a crystal clear voice that took me back to when I was being introduced to mountain music groups and families of Appalachia. It was a pleasure to hear such beauty coming out of Vincent Cross." --Odetta Vincent writes interesting, new, traditional-sounding songs sung in the high lonesome style--the way I like it. --Buddy Merriam WUSB 90.1 FM Stony Brook, Radio Long Island, New York Vincent sings in the traditional high lonesome sound of the great Bill Monroe. You should definitely catch him when you can. --Adam Nash NYCbluegrass.com
