From the snowbound streets of Nashville and the smoky bars of Austin to the Tapas Bars of Andalucia and the Troubador in London, Bill Jackson has been documenting his stories in song out on the fringes of Melbournes music scene for what must seem like forever to him. He remembers sitting in a publishers office on Music City Row and thinking maybe this is it but that was a long time ago and it wasn't He remembers rubbing shoulders with Willis Alan Ramsay, Don Schlitz and Lee Clayton in those dirty Nashville writers dives and slumping into his bed at the Sir John Robertson Hotel next to the old Ryman Auditorium wondering if the right lines and melody would ever materialise maybe they have but you weren't listening He remembers The Hole in the Wall and Armadillo World Headquarters in Austin and how it inspired him in that city of eclectic musical freakshow he just had to get out of London chilled him to the bone and froze his writers pen He remembers the characters, friends, artists and lovers who have shaped his life and he remembers how Bob changed his life with the crack of a snare and a big Hammond Organ sixty ideas in three minutes how he helped him understand Woody, Ramblin Jack, Cisco, Big Bill and a thousand others who gave us a legacy and a belief in doing He treasures a group of artists on our South East Coast who called themselves Lonesome Rex by night and produce statements of artistic beauty by day listened to his songs kept taking him back to his roots to a simplicity in structure complexity was in the heart of the beholders they said he shared their food, wine, stories, good humour and visions Through it all he kept on writing and recording four albums with Urban Nomads and The Hurting Sessions with Mark McSherry never really taking it out there internalising his passion writing writing and now Its all come down to this Bill Jackson doing it for himself always believing that the process far outweighs the end result then turning an emotional full circle and producing an album full of the rich stuff that we could hang our hats on and just maybe need to hear.
