Modigliani Interview with Modigliani: This is no Michael Moore diatribe.its not a political polemic. The film is not about Bush. The film is about the people of Crawford. Honestly, Im tired of films in the Michael Moore style that I think alienate the very people that a film could welcome into a conversation. Its been very meaningful to me that the people in the film, some of whom are very conservative, have supported it.
If the film is controversial, it would only be because it portrays each subject of the film as truly as possible.
