Related styles: WORLD: Celtic, FOLK: Irish Contemporary Details: GHOSTS Terence O'Flaherty Paul Cunningham This is a new album that we would love you to play! GHOSTS has been brought together by musicians, Terence O'Flaherty and Paul Cunningham. The album is a mixture of traditional and contemporary Irish music with new material written both individually and in collaboration. Both musicians came together having met at various mixed music events and following several musical discussion decided to record an album together. Although Terence already has a traditional Irish music background, Paul has been primarily a rock musician to date, and both, in their many metamorphosis have played alongside a diverse array of musicians including Massive Attack, and The Chieftains. Most certainly Paul has proved that despite his very different musical background, that his own Irish blood still draws him to his true roots with this album. The new songs blend well with the traditional ones that have been included on this album. Carrigfergus, and an E Minor version of The Wild Rover, The Old Triangle by Brendan Behan, and a couple of American songs such as Hard Times by Robert Foster, and Boll Weevil. The production of this album allows this material to be heard in a contemporary and refreshing way. Enjoy. Note on the sound clips Sorry, as I was naming the sample clips for cd baby I forgot tracks 11/12 are linked (even though on the actual cd they are heard as one track). Hence the confusion some people may feel when listening to any tracks beyond track 11 as they are out of sequence. I have mentioned this to cd baby but I think it would entail a lot of messing about to fix.
