Ask yourself this If your business has just taken off, are you willing to sacrifice a little bit of cash to invest in building yourself a stable, solid team of part time employees? If your answer is No, consider this: Your business expands and money flows in. But you'll have to keep on updating your blogs and search for new content to do so. - When it comes to writing your sales letters, you struggle and waste a whole day to do when an experienced copywriter could settle within 3-4 hours. - You spend a week or 2 attempting to create your new product, build up the squeeze pages, sales letter, back end pages and loads more. - Customers who have problems with your product or service take up tickets and wait for an eternity for you to solve their problems only to demand a refund in anger later. - Slowly, bit by bit, your regular customers stop buying from you in frustration because your product and after-sales service dropped drastically. Could all of this have been avoided? You bet! Here's What Is In The Course: The main benefits of hiring freelancers over having perm staff The various flexible methods of paying your freelancers that could save you a fortune! The little communication issues that need to be resolved if you want to find a good freelancer Some unusual but effective methods to gauge if a freelancer is the right person for the job Places you can easily find affordable and top notch freelancers Factors to consider when outsourcing your business to a capable virtual assistant Simple tricks and tactics to keep your outsourced team motivated to give their 110 for you Where to find good content writers and how to have them produce exactly what you want Why programmers are harder to hire and important points to keep in mind when hiring them One method to make sure you don't lose money and time if a programmer messes up on you Digging the right places for quality, top notch copywriters to hire at an affordable price! An organization your designer needs to be familiar with before he gets your contract...
