Details: Aaron Senseman has spent the past ten years of his life as a songwriter and worship leader in congregations throughout the Houston area and elsewhere. He has also toured nationally with acts such as Bebo Norman and Caedmon's Call, for whom he penned songs like "Before There Was Time," "Great and Mighty" and "Let Me Be." He has written dozens of other songs, but apart from attending one of his worship services there wasn't a way to hear most of them - until now. "More Than Anything" is a versatile offering with cuts ranging from the energized pop-rock of the title track, to the subtle hints of folk and jazz found in Senseman's arrangement of the hymn classic "Just as I Am" and the world music influence heard on the redemptive "At His Feet." Senseman's past work has garnered a notable, if brief list of industry nods. Among those are a number one radio single, ASCAP Christian Music award and a Dove award, but he had this to say of his success, "I try not to lose sight of why I started writing songs like these. I lead church music, and these songs are expressions of what God is doing in my heart or in my pastor's or in my church community. That's the vital thing - connecting with my congregation on a level that shows I'm invested in them, giving them a new song to sing that says something good and true about who God is, what he's done and what he's doing in our midst. Whatever happens after that I can take or leave."
