Details: Neotokyo is the debut CD release of Ed Harrison, an Australian composer and producer who is active both in the local alternative music scene, and as a composer for film and interactive media. This instrumental release draws from a wide array of influences, from post-rock to classic minimalism, to IDM and atmospheric electronica. There is a distinct focus on mood and atmosphere, with an intention to draw the listener into its unique and cohesive world. 'Neotokyo' is a source mod (computer game) developed by a small group of dedicated artists over a period of around five years. This two-CD set, containing around two and a half hours of music, represents the musical culmination of those years of work, and has been designed not only to provide a musical context for the game, but also a rich and cathartic listening experience as an album. It is not just a soundtrack, but a true double album, and contains around an hour of music not found in the game. Note: This double CD is a limited run, it won't be available forever! If CDBaby list as out-of-stock, however, it should become available again shortly. When the CDs actually run out, this listing will be modified to reflect that.
