Daughter of Evelyn Thomas, new release Fire out soon. emailyahaloma@gmailfor bookings. I met Yahaloma on Twitter a couple of months ago, and seeing she was a musician I made my pitch to hear her work and review it here on Tweepieblog. She agreed and sent me the music from her upcoming release, FIRE. Oh my. This is one talented lady. She has a wonderful voice, the production values are high - as should be expected considering her musical heritage - and possibly the best thing about that music is that it is spiritual music with style. FIRE is somewhat of a departure from her other work Ive found and listened to - its got a definitely modern sound. The artists faith and spiritual roots are entwined throughout the music, but its not intrusive - it empowers the music. Youll be able to read my review of the music shortly. For now, Yahaloma herself. On Twitter she is engaging, funny and interesting. She has a lot of things going on all at the same time, and holds it together admirably. She responds to those who communicate with her, is unfailingly positive and kind, and a heck of a singer on top of all of that.
