FOLK: Modern Folk, FOLK: Traditional Folk Details: Following a decade of song-writing, performing, touring recording together, acoustic duo MUNDY-TURNER are celebrating the release of their latest album, HAPENNY TWEEDLE - and it looks set to be their best yet. Thirteen tracks deliver an hour of masterful vocal instrumental performances from Cath Mundy Jay Turner. The pairs trademark soaring vocal harmonies are a powerful force, while Caths fine fiddle Jays individual open-tuned guitar have never before been so beautifully recorded. The ebullient title track breathes life into the family story of Jays Great-Grandfather, a late-19th century English colliery worker who turned travelling showman with his homebuilt fairground ride, the HaPenny Tweedle. The pair also cleverly re-interpret a range of bush ballads from Caths native Australia, bringing new depth to classic works by Banjo Paterson Henry Lawson. A stark acappella arrangement of the traditional anti-war song c.1815, "Mrs McGrath", aptly contrasts links with Jay's superb new song "Stealing My Democracy", whilst the deely moving "We Can Fly to Heaven" showcases Cath's emotive voice at it most silken pure. Theres a definite old-timey lilt to the album. Yet the collection still manages to pack a contemporary punch with songs like Unfinished Business and bonus track Naked (which treats one of the duos most popular live tracks to a sensitive band arrangement). Presenting a delectable combination of original traditional songs, glorious instrumentals, stunning acappella Australian bush ballads, HAPENNY TWEEDLE finds MUNDY-TURNER at the height of their song-writing performing powers.
