When you listen to these clips try to picture yourself standing in the middle of the rainforest as the distant birds and streams echo around you. When I was recording this I used to imagine that some of the wild animals were actually performing these songs for me, kind of my own private concert. I think that's what helped give the album it's somewhat innocent feel. This album seems to be more upbeat and melodic than others that I've heard. That's partly why I decided to call it The Jungle's "PLAYFUL" Symphony. It's gotten great responses already and it's even become the "soundtrack" to an attraction in Myrtle Beach. I recorded this at my home studio and all in all it took me about six months to complete. I was lucky enough to get Mark Rubel (producer of HUM's Downward is Heavenward album) to clean up my mixes and do some mastering for me. I'm very happy with the way it turned out. Listen to a couple of tracks, if you like it great, it's only ten bucks- If not, thanks for stopping by this page anyway. Matt
