Details: Frank Klepacki has worked for Westwood Studios, Lucasarts, Electronic Arts, Disney, SSI, Hasbro, and Virgin Interactive. With 15 years and over 30 top titles in the industry, he has composed every style of music for every style game genre, as well as provided sound design, and a variety of voice talents. Raised from a musical family, and performing professionally since the age of 11, Frank grew up with music and began composing in high school. Combining his talents with the art of engineering in recording studios, and the world of computers, Franks path was visualized. In 1991 he began composing for games, and in 1995, he pushed the limits of music in the game industry with one of the biggest franchises in the world, Command Conquer. Frank was one of the first to break ground with a music style that had cross-over commercial appeal in a computer game, and would have such an impact, that the soundtrack alone was in demand everywhere. By the year 2000, Frank moved up into Television Film, licensing music for HBO and ABC, and since 2003 through today, is a regular featured recording artist on the Ultimate Fighting Championship. Frank is also one of Vegas' top music producers, recording various artists at Las Vegas' best recording studios. As of 2004, he is currently the audio director for Petroglyph, having recently provided music and all audio for "Star Wars: Empire at War," and it's expansion, "Forces of Corruption."
