Details: Eric Bolvin is one of the hardest working musicians in the San Francisco Bay Area and it shows on his new release Workin It. On the heels of his popular (85 radio stations) and critically acclaimed 2007 release, The Night, The Rain And You, Eric delivers the funk, jazz and soul with a new set of 11 tasty originals and 3 timeless covers. Eric has enlisted the help of some executive talent on Workin It, including keyboardist Jeff Lorber, drummer Dennis Chambers, bassists Nelson Braxton and Myron Dove and guitarist Chris Cain. Eric also utilizes vocals for the first time on four tunes, featuring Bay Area favorites Margo Leduc and Tony Lindsay. I think you will agree that this is Eric's best work yet. Eric's local gigs include regular appearances at Gordon Biersch Brewery, Agenda Jazz Club, DVine, Hedley Club and Unwined in the South Bay as well as the San Jose Jazz Festival, Santa Clara Art Wine Festival and Kuumbwa Jazz Center in Santa Cruz. Eric has performed or recorded with; Russell Ferrante, Jeff Lorber, Dennis Chambers, Greg Adams, Richie Cole, Dave Weckl, Steve Smith, Jerry Bergonzi, Dave Liebman, Dee Daniels, Grant Geissman, Tom Scott and many others. Bolvin is one hot player, drawing from the inspiration of the trumpets masters and turning it into his own sound. In fact, Bolvin has a sound to which many players aspire; and he is a forthright bandleader, composer and arranger. Trevor McLaren - All About Jazz.com With THE NIGHT, THE RAIN AND YOU, Eric Bolvin decisively affirms that he is another bright light from the City by the Bay preparing to take his place among Smooth Jazz notables. Beth Lewis- SmoothJazz.com I have to say that Eric Bolvin is quite impressive. I think hes on to something here. Ronald Jackson- JazzReview.com Eric Bolvin and his group have a firm sense for traditional and bebop, but this album is more than a recreation of the past. Their maturity and inventiveness prevails in every way.
