Classic Soul meets contemporary R&B 15 MP3 Songs URBAN/R&B: Soul, URBAN/R&B: Contemporary urban Details: Wade O. Brown Biography As a young child growing up in Detroit, Michigan, Wade O. Brown sang in church, as most children do. Although his family and friends could see the natural talent that Wade possessed, he was just a kid having fun. As a self-taught keyboard player, Wade joined the church's gospel band. They traveled back and forth to Toronto for gospel shows and conventions. He made friends with musicians in the GTA and with their guidance, began learning his way around a recording studio and familiarizing himself with the music business. At the tender age of 19, Wade decided to relocate to Toronto, on his own. In addition to his love for Toronto, he discovered a true love for music and a base of friends who would help nurture his talent. By 23 years old, Wade was playing keyboards and singing back up vocals for a local reggae band. He observed the art of stage performing and knew it was an art that he wanted to master. Wade was now ready to embrace the talent he was blessed with and began his quest for a solo career. There was no turning back. Wade's voice had developed into something wonderful and it was time to share it with the world. At 25, Wade would get his first big break as a young and passionate musician. A new, American style restaurant was opening up in the downtown Toronto area and Wade took this opportunity to put his own band together and take the stage as a lead vocalist. Night after night, Wade O. Brown wowed his audience and kept the crowd coming back for more. Although the restaurant eventually closed its doors forever, Wade O. Brown's career was in full bloom. Now known for his outstanding stage presence, Wade commanded attention at every venue he performed at. This rising star has gone on to build a list of credits that include a guest appearance on the hit HBO TV show Soul Food, and performing for none other than the Queen of Soul herself, Aretha Franklin at her special birthday event. In addition, Wade has co-starred in several theatrical productions throughout the Country and has been a key performer on the Bump Hustle live music event in Toronto. It was evident that Toronto's music industry embraced Wade O. Brown's talents. He has been featured on several tracks from local artists, such as: Kardinal Official, Maestro, and Choclair to name a few. He has also performed live on MuchMusic and other networks across Canada. Wade O. Brown is on his way to being a true modern soul man. He makes R&B music that comes from the heart with his back to basics, bona fide Motown-style music for the soul. He has built a steady fan base that appreciates his universally enlightening sound.
