Details: Shaun Paul Gordon is the sound of empty parking lots, of abandoned highways on vacant nights, of lost gazes in small town cafes, of old receipts and dog eared photographs, of other people's miseries, of slight embarrassments and awkward moments, of the first girl who undressed for him, of the melancholy of 3 a.m. on a Sunday night, of the suspicion that everything dies, of a few timely letters from his father, of the hearts he has broken, of the syndicated 70s sitcom theme music he heard through the floor of his childhood bedroom, of hours left alone to his own devices, and of the sound of children laughing at other children.
