Details: Baker London was started in 2005 by Sean Fitzpatrick and Trevor Grimm. Their hopes of getting wasted and playing bad music to small audiences in Chicago was fulfilled almost immediately. The duo grew to include multi-instrumentalist wildman Johnny Becker in early 2006. Twenty-some-odd part-time members later, the band went on its first tour in late December '06 and early January '07 of Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, and Maryland. The band lineup was Trevor, Sean, Johnny, Matty, Poncho, and the Reverend. More members came and went for many small tours of the Midwest- playing country dives, barns, lofts, basements, and college campuses with friends These Little Nothings- but when Trevor took a temporary hiatus in the end of April '07, the band was down to Johnny, Sean and Matty. For the chaotic, sprawling 9,000 mile "bake your lemons" summer tour with The P. Lacquers of the same year it was a four piece that included the three members plus new drummer, Max Barcelow. Trevor rejoined the band for two shows at the end of that tour and was tragically lost shortly thereafter. Jukeboxhello was recorded by Andy Thompson in Minneapolis to capture the sound of the band after the "bake your lemons" tour. The four band members are currently scattered between the states of Washington, California, and Colorado.
