World Music - Native American Healing and spiritual music with drumming, singing and guided meditations for stress relief and spirit connection. 7 MP3 Songs WORLD: Native American, WORLD: Drumming Show all album songs: Spirit Connection Songs Details: ARTIST PROFILE Brenda MacIntyre a.k.a. Medicine Song Woman is a leading inspirational speaker, singer and traditional Native hand drummer whose songs are sung globally. Her music has evolved from hip hop and reggae into her own special flavour of Aboriginal hand drumming laced with neo soul. MacIntyres dedication to her musical career recently earned her the 2007 title of Aboriginal Businesswoman of the Year by the Toronto Aboriginal Business Association. MacIntyres career began when sweet, sultry and no-nonsense tough rap and reggae artist Special Ice released her first hit single in Florida (Non Stopping Hip Hopping, Moods International Records) in 1985. The single was charted as a hot new item with high rotation on North Miamis Top 40 station WPOW 96FM. The Parachute Clubs Billy Bryans produced Brenda MacIntyres second single Rock a Talk, which appeared on the Juno Award winning CD The Gathering, released by Attic Records at the Opera House in 1991 (right). In 1995, Brenda MacIntyre picked up her first Aboriginal hand drum, leading to her reconnection with the Aboriginal community at York University, where she got her BA Honours, Summa Cum Laude. From 1999 to 2005, Brenda led Spirit Wind Aboriginal Womens Hand Drum to success, co-producing 3 CDs and writing 13 of the songs on Awakening, which debuted at #1 in World/Folk on New Brunswicks CFMH and made the Top 10 on CFBX in Kamloops, BC. Brenda has performed at The Opera House, The Air Canada Centre, The Phoenix Concert Theatre, Ontario Place and Harbourfronts DuMaurier Centre, as well as folk festivals across Ontario. She has spoken and performed in front of thousands, her audiences ranging from Aboriginal communities to business teams to universities to health professionals. Featured on APTN, VISION TV, CP24, CITY-TV, OMNI and Maori Television in New Zealand, Brenda MacIntyre is committed to spreading inspiration and a message of peace and hope to the world. On MySpaceBrenda maintains a high spot in the Top 100 unsigned neo-soul, roots and healing/easy listening artists, with over 32,000 song plays and nearly 18,000 visitors from July 2006 to March 2007. Brenda MacIntyre can lend a uniquely inspiring and lasting impact to any event through musical performances, traditional Aboriginal openings to crystallize intent, confidence building interactive seminars, lunch-n-learns and motivation infused closings. Brendas latest album Spirit Connection, released in April 2007, includes music and meditation for stress relief and spirit connection, corresponding with her latest leadership program.
