

Mp3 Mark Stafford - The Power Of Keys

Total improv. Right off the cuff, hard driving synthesizer madness and soft piano sadness. A blend of traditional analog Emerson, Lake and Palmer "ish" keyboard sounds, with an occasional dash of honky tonk blues piano. 6 MP3 Songs ELECTRONIC: Ambient, AVANT GARDE: Free Improvisation Details: Mark Stafford presents his first release, as an improvisational exploration of the modern keyboard. Although many of the older vintage keyboards are gone, they are not forgotten. Here, the sounds of those synthesizer days gone by, are joined together with everything from the sadness of a piano, to the madness of the manipulated synthesizer. There's even a humorous look at the pipe organ (Its a Dracula Thing), meeting the electronic world. This is quite a change from a honky tonk piano player. Stafford: After ten years of playing in country bands on the road, I felt it was time to do my own stuff. While I have (and always will) love the piano, I have a hard time pulling myself away from those 1970s sounds, like the Moog, Arp, Clav, and Wurlitzer. I used to go watch a great keyboard player in Orlando (Jerry Schaeffer) who was a master of those sounds, and he taught me a lot about them. He dubbed me the keyboardologist, which kind of stuck with me. People who are interested in Pink Floyd Emerson, Lake Palmer should consider this download.
