Park grew up in rural Wisconsin, and started playing music at an early age. He started writing songs at age 13 and at age 19 completed recording his first album "Nevertheless." Seven years later, Aaron is back with his second album, "In Too Deep" which was recorded at the home where he grew up in south western Wisconsin. His brother Isaac Park, who played bass on "Nevertheless," is back on this new album as bassist and overall recording technician and producer. Stephen park, Aaron's father, plays drums on several tracks, making "In Too Deep" a regular family affair. While "In Too Deep" is full of rich acoustic guitar, thoughtful lyrics, and heartfelt vocals like you came to expect on "Nevertheless," this new album represents a doorway to new musical horizons through which Aaron J. Park has boldly stepped. Upbeat drum tracks, harmony vocals, and creative new musical arrangement and use of effects mean you are in for a treat! Something new from Aaron J. Park on "In Too Deep"
