Nashville musicians Sherry Rich and Rick Plant would sneak out to the studio after putting their baby boy to bed, grab the kazoo, ukulele or banjo and get down to some serious silliness recording these original tunes that celebrate milestones in the first few years of a 'little monkey's life. Influenced more by The Beatles and Frank Zappa than Walt Disney, the resulting music is alive and organic with some weird percussion and real sound effects that your kids will love. Track one 'Monkey Boy' may even boast the first ever harmonizing ululele solo! Check out titles like The Snot Song and Poo Party and you'll find a charming irreverance that is rare in todays kids CD's. After being whipped into a frenzy by the first nine songs 'Bathtime' will help coax your little monkeys into the bubbles and then 'So Sleepy' and 'Dreamtime' will have them drooling on the pillow in no time. The last track introduces our funky rodent friend, Soul Mouse doing his best Al Green voice for 'Be Good To Your Mama'. Sherry Rich is a native of Australia - hence her use of 'nappy' instead of diaper - and her music has been widely released on vinyl and CD in Australia, Japan, Europe and the US, beginning with the all girl powerpop band Girl Monstar (1988 - 1993), moving onto her own country rock projects Sherry Rich and the Grievous Angels and Sherry Rich and Courtesy Move ('94 - 98) and most recently with the paisley underground duo The Grapes ('99) and a classic country recording The Rich Family Album ('02) After a six year contract with BMG Music publishing, she recently signed to Bug Music. Titles from her extensive song catalogue have been used in motion picture soundtracks and recorded by major artists in Australia and the US. Go to sherryrichfor more info.
