A cleverly written and strikingly well produced song created for EII as a fundraiser to support the on-line program. Emotional intelligence (E.I.) is helping us learn to monitor our minds and manage emotions better - to think and act in healthier ways. Limited understanding about our minds, emotionally, causes many problems that disrupt the quality of our lives. When we know that what were feeling, thinking, saying or doing is not healthy and we are able to stop and control ourselves, were improving our EI. By making healthy sense of our feelings, it helps improve how we structure our attitudes, motivate ourselves, and qualify healthy behavior. It empowers us in every realm of our lives. Better understanding can reduce everyday frustrations, depression, dysfunctions and half-hearted efforts. In society, EI can reduce neglect, abuse, divorce and other family problems as well as crime, unemployment, accidents, illness, wastefulness and world tension. By realizing that the number one consideration of a civilized society is the credibility of behavior, it helps us recognize the importance of furthering such education. The Emotional Intelligence Song was created for the Emotional Intelligence Institute (EII) as a fundraiser to support the cost of its on-line free program - to help people improve their EQ. The songs income will also be used to finance the annual Emotional Intelligence (EI) Awareness Month campaign in October each year. The campaign is coordinated by the institute, a non-profit organization. The following professionals were involved in the songs creation: Written by Scott Kalechstein and Sandra Hughes, Music Production by Kristopher Stone, Graphics by Carrie Swansiger and Kristopher Stone, EII Project Coordinated by Sandra Hughes Learn more about emotional intelligence by reading the latest edition of Daniel Golemans book that introduced the concept in 1995 (Emotional Intelligence: Why It Can Matter More Than IQ), and by searching for emotional intelligence on the internet and at your local library/book store.
